Æmilius

Delve deep into the minds of a CIA agent avenging the death of his MI6 partner, the serial killer that did it, and the serial killer's son, who's out to make a killing of his own to set his father up for failure. Highly suspenseful and thrilling, 9•2•5 resonates as an at times psychotic tale of revenge. Gregory Belittled breaks from his nine-to-five life by making a fortune coming up with an anti-skimming mechanism for the Bank of Las Vegas and uses it to buy everything he needs to take his father down.

A new writing style no one has used before? Try this book. It may not stand out at first, but when the book progresses through its chapters, you'll notice things are slightly different. The use of different tenses to slow the story down or speed it up. The perspective changing mid-section to someone else that suddenly drives the action. It can all be done and it has all been done – now!

About the writer:

Æmilius was born into a different kind of country: the Netherlands - a country with condoning policies for anything against the law: drugs, rape, murder, mayhem...

Little did he know when first trying to press charges against his own father, he would face a reluctant police force that would only allow the victims to press charges and even then, then and only then if they managed to prove that they were right.

Forget about the fact that the procedures were such that women shouldn't shower before turning to the police to report they had been raped: the police even today forces them to wait four weeks, meaning all of the evidence of rape literally washes down the drain as they shower disallowing them to press charges.

The Netherlands, a country ruled by outlaws and lawless bandits... Where do the innocent stand?
